Course Description and Learning Goals

This course uses economic analysis to examine the design of organizations, and the relationship between organizational structure and corporate strategy. The first half of the course focuses on relationships within the firm. Topics in this first half include agency problem and incentive pay, decision power and divisional relationship, organization structure, internal labor market and human capital. The second half of the course focuses on the boundaries and market relationships of the firm. The topics include conglomerate diversification, horizontal merger, vertical integration, and post-merger integration. The learning objectives include:

- Use tools, concepts, and theories from microeconomics and industrial organization in analyzing organization design and management.
- Identify the linkage between organization structure and industry environment.
Evaluate different strategic choices on organization scope, such as horizontal mergers, vertical integration, and conglomerate diversification, and their impacts on firms’ decision-making.

Effectively communicate economic intuition about organization strategies to people in academia and in private sectors.

Study Groups and Case Study Method

Each group should comprise of no fewer than four but no more than six people.

The groups are responsible for working on the cases and the assignments.

The approach toward teaching and learning strategy and organization is primarily inductive. That is, you will learn many concepts and topics outlined above largely through cases, examples and some simple models – this is the essence of the case study method. The goal is to carefully study specific business situations and decisions with the goal of extracting broader principles, which will then be available to you in a wide variety of managerial contexts.

Good cases are necessarily complex and ambiguous. In preparing for case discussions, you may find sorting through this complexity and ambiguity to be frustrating. The problems presented in the case discussion may not have one correct answer. However, there will generally be a set of insights and solutions which are better than others. And it is in working through the messy details to find these insights and solutions – both in your own preparation and in class discussion – that the concepts and principles introduced in the readings and lectures will come alive and be enriched for you.

For a case discussion to be a valuable learning experience, it is essential that you come prepared to discuss the cases. Finally, I ask that you deal with the cases as you find them; do not seek outside or post-case data on the firm or the industry.

What Is The Structure Of A Typical Week?

Each week we cover some particular topics and cases.

1. Before class: You should read the case and think through answers to each of the case preparation questions before coming to class. I strongly recommend meeting with your group members weekly to go through these questions.

2. In class: I’ll upload soft copies of the lecture notes online. You can take notes on the key insights we are developing, but you won’t need to copy down everything.

3. After class: I’ll upload the case notes or learning points. It is provided so that you can participate in the discussion rather than take notes.

How Will You Be Graded?

Please note that we will follow the attendance policy used by the MBA program: if you miss two meetings, your grade will be reduced (e.g. from A- to B+), and if you miss more than two meetings, you will have to withdraw from the class.

The grade is made up of four components:

1. Final Exam (50%): The final will be an in-class exam on Mar 28. It will be a combination of a few mini-case questions and quantitative questions. It is possible that there will be questions about the cases we discussed in class.

2. The First Group Assignment (15%): Some groups will submit written analysis on “Alibaba Group” and the other groups will do so on “P&G Organization” in Week 3 (Feb 14). We will have random draws in Week 1. The report should be in PowerPoint format. During the class, some groups will be selected to make a 20-min presentation.

3. The Second Group Assignment (15%): All groups will work on a few questions in Week 6 (Mar 14). Detailed instructions will be given later.

4. Class Contribution (20%): Attendance, preparation, and participation are essential in this class, as in any class based on the case method. Obviously, you cannot participate if you are not present, so absences without legitimate excuses will lead to a reduced grade as mentioned above. Learning opportunities are maximized when students are actively engaged in class discussion. Active engagement means that you’re are listening carefully to the comments of other students and seeking opportunities to make comments that move discussion forward.

Class contribution will be evaluated primarily on (1) the effort and incentives to prepare and to participate in class discussion, and (2) the evaluation of content based on the following:

- Relevance: Are your comments related to the case and to the comments of others?
- Advancement: Does your comment move the class discussion forward?
- Fact-Based: Have you used specific data from the case, from readings, or from personal experience to support the assertions that you are making?
- Logical: Is your reasoning logical? Do you use economic concepts correctly?

What Materials Will We Use?

The key materials are the lecture notes, cases, and additional readings, to be uploaded on the course site. Due to copyright, you should not distribute these materials outside our class for any education or business purpose.

HKUST Academic Integrity and Honor Code

The HKUST Academic Integrity and Honor Code apply to this course. The complete text of the Academic Integrity and Honor Code is available on the websites:

- http://www.ust.hk/vpaa0/conduct/good_learning_experience.pps

Group Assignment

The assignment must be strictly your group’s original work. You may not discuss these assignments with any person other than your group members. You should not use outside industry or company reports regarding the cases.

Classroom Etiquette

Students are expected to arrive for class on time and the instructor will start and end the class according to schedule. Students should demonstrate respect for the instructor and fellow students during the class period. Please try to avoid side conversations when your classmates raise questions or give comments.

You are welcome to bring your laptop or ipad to class in order to take notes or perform calculations on your own computer. However, you may not engage in distracting behavior such as using your laptop to surf the Web, to check e-mail, or to do instant-messaging. For general guidelines about proper classroom behavior, please consult: http://www.ust.hk/vpaa0/conduct/good_learning_experience.pps
Course Outline

This detailed course structure is designed to help you organize what you learn into a coherent framework. However, it is important to recognize upfront that this class cannot be as perfectly organized as the outline suggests. This is not accounting or statistics which begin with core, universally accepted principles, and then build to harder problems and applications. Instead, strategy is complicated throughout, and we may adjust the detailed topics or learn new tools throughout the course to answer new questions that arise.
