COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course will introduce the basic concepts such as present values, interest rates of financial markets. Since the core function of financial markets is to channel funds from savers/lenders to borrowers/producers who have the productive opportunities, this course will study the institutions that carry out this function. We will also study the principles behind the institutional arrangement. After completing the course, students should have the basic understanding of the time value of money, interest rate, yield curve, security markets, central banking and commercial banking.
